755 ends, as well as by the utilization of medicines to be used in-
757 ternally and externally. Altogether I learned of seven doctors,
756 but their number may be larger. One of these, in Village 16, was regarded as an evil witch doctor. The sick chief of this village was not being treated by him, but rather downstream in Village 19 by a famous doctor to whom the Karajá came from ●758 afar to be cured. He had opened a sort of hospital: several 756 mat walls had been stretched, in the shade of which the sick lay on mats, tended and supported by their relatives. There were three or four sick persons of both sexes lying here.

114 I did not see any curing ceremonies. In Village 14 I heard
755 singing and rattling coming from the west end of the village, but I was not permitted to go there when I announced my intention of observing Chief Ilk from Village 13 during his activity as doctor.

756 The doctors are paid for their services in boats, pots, food, etc. If the patient dies, they allegedly receive no payment.

752 The Karajá have considerable knowledge of surgery.

[278] Minor wounds are brushed with the decoction of a red tree bark (ōdŭdĕwŏ) which is kept in large quantities in pots with a little water. Or ashes are sprinkled on bleeding wounds (for example, cutting the umbilical cord), or a little urucú oil color is brushed on minor injuries, so that flies do not get on them. Applying tourniquets to injured limbs also seems to be known already. Festering leg wounds (as a result of injury: kūdjŭ) are washed with warm water; in this way they heal by themselves.

Deep wounds, such as those from arrow shots and the like, are /336/ also cauterized. For this, a human lower-leg bone is used (Ill. 187; dēĭ or wŏlĭsõtĭ), which is wound with bast. Its lower end is browned from the fire. In the case of arrow shots, another remedy is said to be used, one that brings about complete healing in a very short time, allegedly in one day (?).

Broken limbs, according to Ehrenreich ("Beiträge," p. 32), are healed with splints. The chief of Village 16, whom I met in the hospital, /Ill. 187 appears here/ allegedly had a broken leg, but there was no splint bandage. According to Kurišĭ's statement, they do not know how to heal broken arms and legs.
